

2012 Here on in

With 2012 beginning the world is starting to awaken to a new beginning. A new start to the general existence of the human race. For the pace has been set and the gong on the clock has struck. The ball is rolling for change to take place. The light is coming to bring peace and love into the human race. To help them to face new things that never before have they encountered. For change is to take place no matter who defies it. It has to happen in order for this planet to survive on into the centuries ahead.

So as you rest your weary head upon your bed know that it will soon be feeling different. It will soon be feeling freer to do the things that you want to do and to sing the sound that you want to make. For this world has become fake. It has become one big sham - people trying to compete with another, trying to outdo the next in order to stay up on top. Yet what happened to neighbourly love and respect? What happened to helping those around you when in their hour of need?

The world has become a can of worms – people all squirming around in the dark, unable to see the light that is above them as they are stuck in their dramas and stories of difficulty and stress. In fact what a mess it has all become. One big conundrum. How will this world manage such a massive change as is to come and is still to be seen but yet is inevitable nonetheless? Only the light can save this planet from devastation now. A light that is so bright that it will change the very way of being from one that is in the dark to one that is all seeing, allowing the mind and spirit of all to be free and to join together as one in bringing this world to a place of love and tranquillity.

However, first there must be a stirring up of the surface. A movement within the people that will in itself invoke change. For whilst only some want change and others fight against it, change will be difficult to fully bring about. So it is time now to help those who have doubt to find away to put away their fear and to see this as a positive year. A year when the negative belt that has been formed will no longer be a burden to those on this earth. For the energy of it will lift at last and people will start to see their life in a way that will bring brightness and joy to their day. Where they will take time to look into the sky and see the birds and the bees, enjoy the sun and the cool breeze. Admire the trees and the stars at night. Where people will start to appreciate the things in their day instead of finding things to moan about which only bring their energies down.

The sky will start to look bluer than ever before, the colours will glow and the love on the planet will flow. For it is very much a time of learning to live by the heart learning to let go of the fear in the head and mind and to only love find. Finding love deep inside where it will drive through the whole body and create a feeling of wonderment and pure delight. For this is a plight of something wonderful. It is not the end of the earth but the beginning of something brand new. The beginning of times which we have never experienced before whilst in the human form. For even though in spirit there is nothing but love and joy, in the human form people have become forlorn.

So to make 2012 a great year for you, allow yourself to be one of the few that will help carry the light through. That will help to bring a different essence to the earth where the planet and animals and people can all enjoy living side by side, with no worry as to how they might survive. Where people will start to enjoy being around each other and see them as a sister or a brother. For they will not see them as a threat or try to compete in their dress or their head. For there is much beauty in everyone. It may not be apparent in the way that the world has become, and the thoughts that have been fed into your head as to what is beautiful and what is not. But it is true if you truly learn to let go of the judgements that you have and the fears that you hold and you learn to love with all your heart, body, mind and soul.

It is like stepping into a hot air balloon basket and feeling your feet lift off the ground. Imagine just floating in the air drifting purely on hot air. Allowing yourself to believe in yourself and who you are and enjoying each person around you as if you are all stars. For indeed you all are. Everyone is a person who potential could shine a great light if only they could let go of the conditioning that they have had and learn to be bold. Learn to be true the very person that they are and just shine, shine, shine.

Life a fine wine maturing quietly on the shelf and this planet has now reached a time of maturity. A time when the fruits of the work that has been done must now be enjoyed. Where the people can learn to use all of the skills and self help information that has been brought down to them to bring them into a place of light. To take them from the darkness that they have succumbed to, through no fault of their own, and take them into a place where they can feel at peace at last. Where their lives will be one long blast. Where they will feel only wonderful each day and their minds will be full of enjoyment and happiness and their hearts full of love. Imagine such a world and how freeing it would be. Imagine the impact it would have on all those who have lost their way and found themselves in a place where they thought only the rats would survive.

Think of all the children and how their lives will be transformed and the future generations after them and how their new families will go on in this new way of being. Imagine how wonderful the world would be and envisage the beauty of it deeply. For it will happen. No matter how difficult a journey it is to get there and no matter how much clearing has to occur to achieve it, this will be the future of the world. So when you are sitting in your homes wondering how you can take a step towards it, light a candle and look into the light. See the light and feel the flow of the flame and know that this flame will be in the hearts and minds of many very soon. That the world will be a much kinder, brighter and more wonderful place to be than ever before. So set yourself free from the rat race that is and start to make a step further into the light. And enjoy your plight as you do.